HOUSTON – We are still a long way from having a true top-to-bottom fight between the Houston Texans and Tennessee Titans at Reliant Stadium. It's an event some believe the NFL is trying to create. "I think it's in its embryonic stages," Titans running back Chris Johnson said. That's the biggest unknown when it comes to Monday night's game between the two former AFC South rivals. Both teams have made significant roster and coaching changes over the past year. Johnson, now in his eighth season, has been the premier running back in the NFL the last three years. That's a fact. I know this. Johnson knows this. As Johnson sees it, you are either a superstar or you aren't. And he doesn't think the Texans are on the same level as the Titans. "I think you're just a star," Johnson said. "And I don't think they are. I think that's the big reason we didn't want to play them in the opener. ... They got a couple of good football players, but I don't think they're that good." The Titans are no longer the AFC South team to be afraid of. Johnson acknowledges they have made some progress since their 2-14 record in 2008, which was their first winning season since 2000. Johnson has a lot of respect for Titans coach Mike Munchak. "I like Mike," Johnson said. "He's one of the best coaches in the league. I like that man. He's a passionate guy. I like him. I know a lot of football players. They're always talking about the NFL, and they like to get back and be around the team. I like that. I think I've played for some good coaches. I think that helps you a lot." Playing a good team is not 82157476af
